Banner-Question Key

This detailed set of statistical tables shows survey results for the total general population and also by various subgroups of interest. For this table set there are three “banners” of subgroups, drawn from questions in the survey. The results have also been tested for significant differences within these subgroups. The statistical tests undertaken are an independent T-Test for means and independent Z-Test for percentages. The following key shows the questions used to create the banner subgroups and also what groups have been tested for significant differences in each of the banners.

In the tables that follow, upper case letters under the percentages indicate subgroup differences that are significant at the 95% level.

Q4. For the next few questions, we'd like to use a broader definition of citizenship than the legal status given by the government. This broader definition of a citizen is someone who is an active member of their community, province, territory or country.

Thinking about this definition of citizenship, do you feel like you are fully, partly or not a citizen?

Q4. For the next few questions, we'd like to use a broader definition of citizenship than the legal status given by the government. This broader definition of a citizen is someone who is an active member of their community, province, territory or country.
Thinking about this definition of citizenship, do you feel like you are fully, partly or not a citizen?
