Banner-Question Key

This detailed set of statistical tables shows survey results for the total general population and also by various subgroups of interest. For this table set there are five “banners” of subgroups, drawn from questions in the survey. The results have also been tested for significant differences within these subgroups. The statistical tests undertaken are an independent T-Test for means and independent Z-Test for percentages. The following key shows the questions used to create the banner subgroups and also what groups have been tested for significant differences in each of the banners.

In the tables that follow, upper case letters under the percentages indicate subgroup differences that are significant at the 95% level.

Q8A. The recent global financial crisis prompted citizens in many countries to launch an “Occupy” movement to protest the growing gap in income between the wealthy and everyone else. In Canada, the Occupy movement set up tent camps in a number of cities to protest income inequality in this country. These camps remained in place for several months until they were forced to disband.

Do you strongly approve, somewhat approve, somewhat disapprove or strongly disapprove of the way in which Canadians took action to make their voices heard on this issue?

Q8B. Earlier this year, students in Quebec launched a major protest of the provincial government's plan to increase college and university tuitions to help cover the rising cost of education. Students and other citizens marched in the streets over many months to pressure the government to freeze or reduce tuition costs, and to protest government laws passed to restrict such protests.

Do you strongly approve, somewhat approve, somewhat disapprove or strongly disapprove of the way in which Canadians took action to make their voices heard on this issue?

Q8C. In 2010, the BC Government introduced a new harmonized sales tax, similar to the HST now in some other provinces. A group of citizens opposed to this tax collected enough signatures to force a province-wide referendum, in which 55% voted to repeal the HST. The HST will now be replaced by the previous GST and PST sales taxes.
